

Connecting Today's Businesses With Tomorrow's Talent

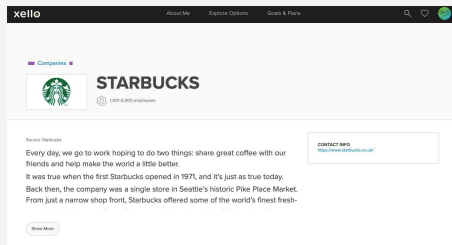

People are most successful when they have the opportunity to explore their interests and skills early on in life. By partnering with secondary school educators in your community, you can help today's students gain exposure to careers, develop employability skills, and build tomorrow's talent pool.

How It Works

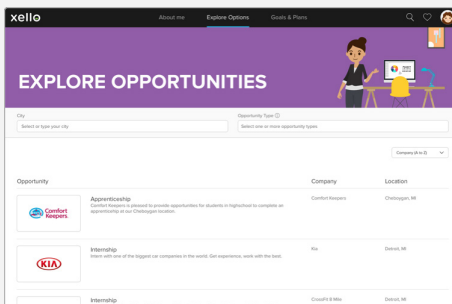

Students in your community are already using an online program called Xello to build self-knowledge, explore post-secondary options, and develop plans for their future.

As a programme partner, you will join the Xello network and connect directly with secondary school educators and students by creating a profile, sharing your expertise, and offering work-related learning experiences.

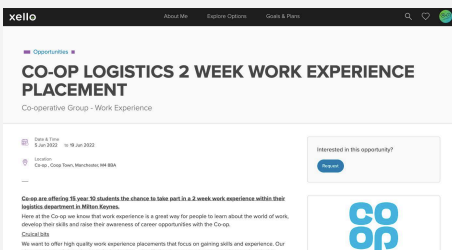

Promote Your Organisation

Increase your organisation's visibility and help students discover the career paths you support with a modern and engaging profile.

Offer Work-related Learning Opportunities

Expose students to in-demand occupations and help bridge the skills gap by offering real-world experiences and hands-on training.

Share Your Expertise

Connect with students looking to learn more about your organisation or industry, and support their career exploration efforts by sharing your experiences.